Description

When creating subsections of vehicles (usually something without a command module) in the VAB, they do not show up in the saved vehicle list, from the VAB. However when going directly to the launch pad and choosing a vehicle there, the vehicle shows up. I've had this happen on numerous occasions.

Steps to Replicate:

- 1) Start with PPD-12 Cupola and attach MPL-LG-2 (or vice versa)
- 2) Save ship
- 3) Go to load ship
- 4) Vehicle is not listed
- 5) Go to launch pad, from space center, and choose vehicle to launch; vehicle that was just saved is listed.

Expected:

- Any vehicle saved in VAB or SPH to be in saved list of vehicles, that can be loaded back in VAB or SPH

Fixes/Workarounds:

- 1) Go directly to launch pad, from space center
- 2) Place vehicle on pad
- 3) Then revert to VAB (however still does not place vehicle in load list, in VAB)

Notes:

-Has occurred with other vehicle setups. May be related to a combination of having no engine or command module attached. Haven't had to issue occur with a normal rocket build.

Driving the rental I had just picked up at the airport, my mind was a whirl of fantasy filled thoughts. I was on my way to a real estate conference in the city where one of my favorite aunts lives <http://www.analpornvideos.xxx>. I was fantasizing about what I would like to do with this sexy woman if I got her alone. I wanted to get her naked and get in bed with her. I wanted her to cuddle me to her big bosom and I wanted her to take my hard cock in her hands and tell me she wanted it. I needed to feel the softness of her face as she nuzzled my hard cock <https://nudecam69.com>. I had let her know that I might have some time to stop in and see her. She had insisted that I stay with her and not at a motel. I didn't want to at first because I didn't care much for being around her husband. She added that she had recently been emboldened to dump her abusive husband of fifty years so there was plenty of room. Things were looking up.
