Description

It's not a gamebreaking bug, but very annoying and led to some problems in a modded install. So I took it to stock and low-and-behold even a simple two pod craft triggers it. That is, using the right click menu "Transfer Crew" button. I am unsure if it is a windows only problem. The log produces no errors or any log whatsoever pertaining to the transferring of crew.

Note: in the output log you can see I tried multiple configurations of pods, and it doesn't matter what pod you use, transferring crew deletes the crew pictures, and a vessel update(such as docking) will refresh them.

I am also to believe that you can no longer EVA kerbals when this happens...

Curiously, Gwen let her right hand roam up to the helmet-shaped tip, rubbing over its smooth, shiny surface with her palm. Almost as soon as she touched it, Ben stiffened, his wiry, toned muscles abruptly tightening emphasizing just how fit he actually was. His face twisted once more, not with pain, but pleasure, and Gwen suddenly felt... powerful <https://freeonlineporn.me>. She squeezed the tip a little as her other hand continued to stroke his length, and suddenly, her hand was wet, something warm and slick and sticky coating her palm and getting between her fingers. She glanced back to the tip in surprise and saw both it and her hand half-covered in clear, glistening liquid. It should have been disgusting, but somehow, it felt really good on her skin... <https://hotmyfreecams.com> She stared, confused, for a moment, before she realized what it was- precum. He'd gotten so excited he was leaking precum.
